

Bleeding Gorgeous

WHY OMBRE IS FASHION'S BUZZ WORD FOR WINTER

No we're not talking dippy, hippy tie-dye. Colour bleeding or 'ombre,' in fashionista speak, is a massive trend that started this season and will carry on right through to next.

A key feature in the collections of Louis Vuitton, Prada, Alberta Ferretti and Matthew Williamson (who produced swoon-worthy ombre dyed jackets and dresses), this dainty dying technique has already seeped into the collections of our favourite high street stores.

Scarlett Johansson set the tone with a gorge pink and blue ombre Louis Vuitton prom dress and stars including Dita VT, Thandie Newton, Ali Larter and Nicole Kidman have been spotted wearing the trend on everything from skirts and shoes to handbags. Girls – this really is the time to be dye-ing for your fashion fix...

Should YOU wear it?

To pull off this trend, think less is more. Opt for one key ombre piece per outfit: a Prada-esque shift or a Matthew Williamson-like scarf, and keep everything else minimal. Combining too many of these dip dyes will make you look like an explosion in a New Age shop and that is sooo not cool, babe!
